Your benefit, optimized

Your Social Security retirement benefit is one of the few things in life that's uniquely yours. Yet your filing decision could affect your loved ones as well. Decisions you make about when to start benefits are usually permanent, which makes it important to figure out how to get the most out of this choice of a lifetime.

The longer you wait, the higher your benefit amount.

You can file as early as age 62, but you would receive a reduced monthly benefit. Or you could delay filing up to age 70 to increase your monthly benefit by as much as 77%.¹

Source: "Your Social Security Statement," Social Security Form SSA-7005-SM-OL (01/22). Chart represents the monthly benefit amount for a hypothetical worker currently earning $54,000 and whose full retirement age is 67.

Are you on track for your Social Security decision?

¹ This figure is based on an individual with full retirement age of 67; it compares early filing at age 62 and receiving reduced benefits of 71% of the primary insurance amount versus delayed filing at age 70 and receiving credits to increase benefits by 25% of the primary insurance amount.

* Full retirement age (FRA)

This is the age when you are eligible to begin receiving the entirety of the monthly Social Security retirement benefit you are eligible for based on your lifetime employment record. For individuals born prior to 1943, FRA occurred at age 65. Thereafter, FRA began gradually increasing to age 67. Early filing can occur starting at age 62 and go until full retirement age. But you can delay filing up to age 70 in order to increase your benefit amount.

Optimizing your Social Security benefit can provide for your loved ones

Benefits for spouses

Spouses are eligible for benefits based on their spouse's earnings record, and for a nonworking spouse, these benefits may represent significant dollars.

Benefits for surviving spouses

Survivor benefits can significantly affect lifetime earnings from Social Security. A surviving spouse is eligible based on the deceased spouse's record.

Benefits for divorced individuals

Divorced persons may be eligible for benefits based on the ex-spouse's record. However, the couple must have been married for at least 10 years, and the ex-spouse claiming the benefits must be currently unmarried.

Benefits for other family members

Family members other than spouses may be eligible for benefits too. There is a family maximum limit based on a percentage of the earner's average wages.
